Thank You to JCP Peer Reviewers

At The Journal of Clinical Psychiatry, we continuously strive to put forth high-quality offerings, including reports of original research, systematic reviews, commentaries, and continuing medical education opportunities. The works we publish embody our mission to serve practicing psychiatric clinicians, to advance clinical research, and, most importantly, to positively impact patient care. It is critical to have knowledgeable and conscientious reviewers in order to responsibly advance evidence-based treatment. Peer reviewers make up an integral part of the scientific community and enrich the field.

Those who have both the expertise and generosity to perform the task of peer review are in an ideal position to mentor others to do the same. I hope that our esteemed reviewers will reach out to junior colleagues and invite them to, with mentorship, become reviewers. We also welcome opportunities to identify junior and midlevel colleagues who are advancing in our field and would like to join us in the process of peer review. As an editor, I am often asked how one can become more involved with a journal. Becoming a reviewer is an excellent way to do so, as peer reviewing makes us better-informed readers, writers, researchers, and practitioners. This year, we will begin offering CME credit as a benefit to peer reviewers. To learn more about the peer review process, visit Psychiatrist.com/reviewers.

As always, we are grateful for the contributions of all JCP Editorial Board members and reviewers, and we commemorate our highest volume reviewers with inclusion in the Circle of Honor.

We hope the new year is one of peace and good health for all of you.
